Because while solar panels themselves aren't free, the electricity they generate for 25+ years can dramatically reduce what you're paying for power—and that savings potential is very real. If you've shopped around for a solar panel system, you've probably heard claims of. When something is advertised as “free,” it usually comes with a few strings attached—free solar panels are no exception. Companies that offer “free” solar panels are typically offering solar lease agreements, so you can reap the benefits of solar-powered electricity without dealing with the upkeep. Today, you have multiple ways to go solar with little to no money down—each with different pros and cons for your savings, ownership, and long-term flexibility. Join over 8,000 people who received a free, no obligation quote in the last 30 days. The promise is certainly appealing — so much so that it might seem too good to be true, or even suspicious. So, what does “free” really mean, and are. However, there are other options worth exploring that allow you to go solar with little to no upfront cost, such as programs that offer “free” solar panel installation on your home.
